II. Senate Election

- The Scott Brown - Elizabeth Warren race is one of the closest watched in the country and one of the few in which Democrats have a very good chance of gaining a seat.
- Both Brown and Warren are popular candidates
- Brown has high job approval ratings, well over the 46% typically seemed as needed for re-election.
- Brown is remarkably popular for a Republican and Warren is also well liked for a newcomer to MA politics.
- A very high percentage of voters remain undecided – the race is wide open.

Scott Brown has a high job approval rating, 60% of likely voters say they approve of the job Brown is doing as Senator, 31% disapprove, and 9% are neutral.

- a. His highest approval ratings come from Republicans and voters in southeastern MA, Cape & Islands.
- b. Brown's lowest approval ratings come from Democrats and minorities, although 44% of Democrats and 32% of minorities approve of the job he is doing as Senator.

Favorability Ratings

Brown also enjoys high favorability ratings for a Republican in MA, 55% of likely voters have a favorable opinion of Brown, 30% have an unfavorable opinion of him, 9% are neutral and 5% don't know enough about him to say. Brown's net favorability rating is +25%, unchanged since March.

- a. In March, 54% of likely voters said they had a favorable opinion of Brown and 29% had an unfavorable opinion of him.
- b. Republicans and voters in southeastern MA, Cape & Islands are most likely to have favorable opinions of Brown.
- c. Democrats and minorities give Brown his lowest favorability ratings.
- d. However, 35% of Democrats say they have a favorable opinion of Brown, 47% have an unfavorable opinion of him.
- e. Minorities are also split in their views of Brown – 39% have a favorable opinion of him and 37% have an unfavorable opinion.

Warren's favorability ratings have declined slightly in recent months – 48% have a favorable opinion of Warren, 32% have an unfavorable opinion, 8% are neutral and 12% don't know enough about her to say. Warren's net favorability rating is +16%, down from +24% in March.

- a. In March, 47% of MA likely voters said they had a favorable opinion of Warren, 23% had an unfavorable

- opinion, 6% were neutral and 25% didn't know enough about her to say.
- Democrats and minorities give Warren her highest favorability ratings.
 - Republicans and voters in southeastern MA, Cape & Islands are most likely to have an unfavorable opinion of Warren.

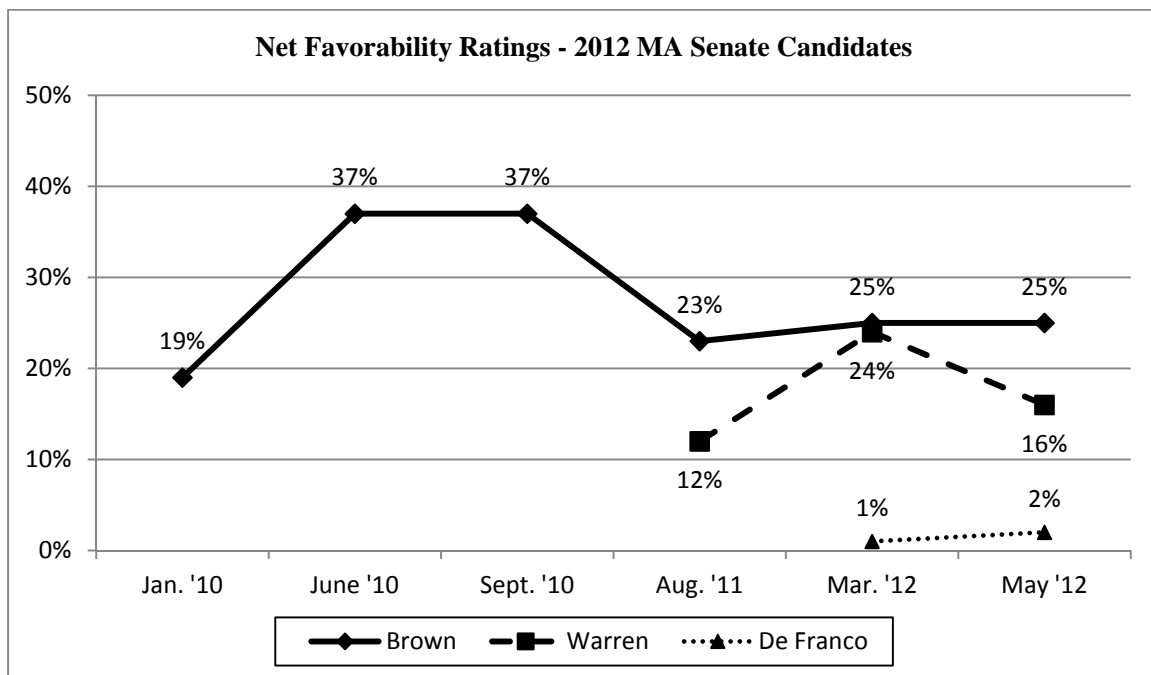

Marisa De Franco remains essentially unknown – only 7% of likely voters have a favorable opinion of DeFranco, 5% have an unfavorable opinion of her, 11% are neutral, and 77% don't know enough about her to say. Her net favorability rating is +2%, unchanged from +1% in March.

- In March, 5% of MA likely voters said they had a favorable opinion of De Franco, 4% had an unfavorable opinion, 8% were neutral and 82% didn't know enough about her to say.

 Likely 2010 Special Senate Election Voters

Voter Indecision

Looking to the November election, just over half of likely voters say they have made up their minds who they will vote for – only 55% say they have definitely decided who they will vote for, 14% are leaning toward a candidate, and 32% are still trying to decide.

- a. In March, 45% said they had definitely decided who they will vote for, 13% were leaning to a candidate, and 42% said they were undecided.
- b. The high percentage of voters who say they are still undecided is further indication that this race is wide open.

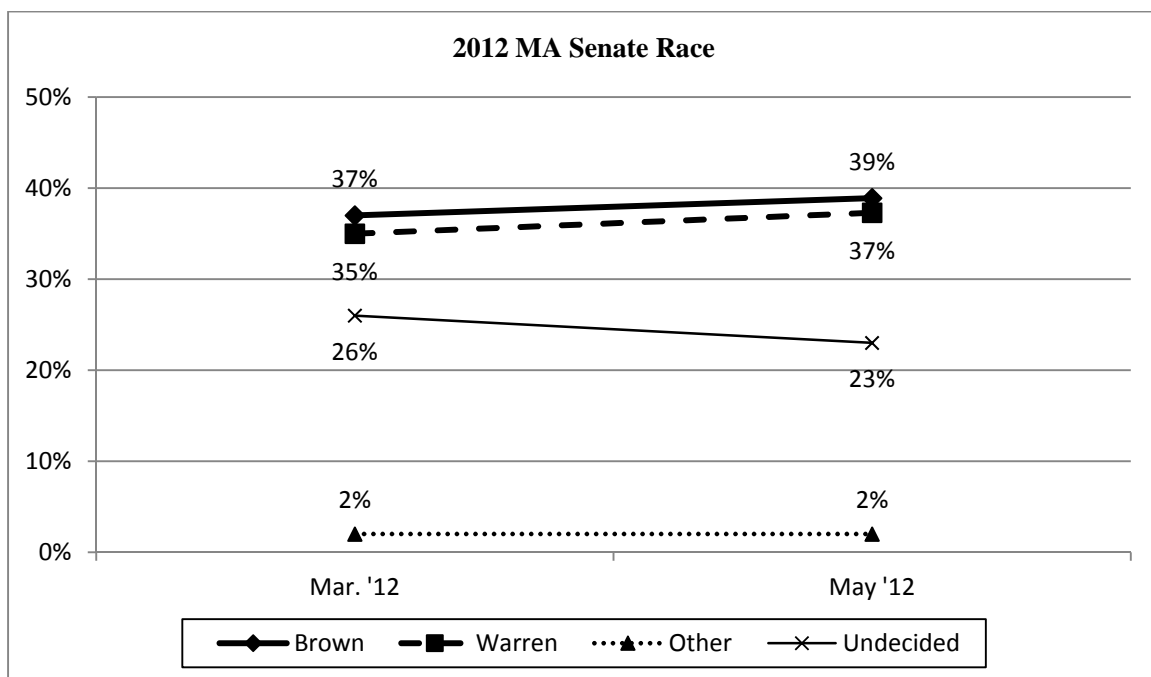

Senate Trial Heat

Among likely voters, 39% say they will vote for Brown, 37% say they will vote for Warren, 2% prefer some other candidate, and 23% are undecided.

- This is largely unchanged since March when 37% said they would vote for Brown, 35% said they would vote for Warren, 2% for some other candidate, and 26% were undecided.
- Support generally breaks down along party lines – Democrats (63%) are most likely to support Warren while Republicans (82%) are most likely to support Brown.
- Independents continue to break for Brown 48% to 25%. In March, Independents preferred Brown 42% to 14%.
- There is a small gender gap in Browns favor – he leads among men by 11 percentage points (45% to 34%) while Warren only leads among women by 5 percentage points (39% to 34%).
- Among voters who say they have definitely decided, Brown holds a 53% to 46% lead, up slightly from 51% to 48% in March. Less decided voters are leaning slightly to Warren.
- A significant reason Warren is having difficulty is that there is considerable drop-off from the top of the ticket. Eight percent of Obama voters say they will vote for Brown, only 70% for Warren, and 21% are still undecided.

Brown is seen as the clear favorite by MA voters, 52% think that Brown will win the Senate election, only 27% think Warren will win, 2% think some other candidate will win and 19% are unsure.

- 34% of Democrats and 17% of Warren supporters think Brown will win.

Brown continues to be seen as the most likable candidate – 52% say Brown is most likable and 26% say Warren is, 9% say they are equal, 2% think neither is, and 11% don't know.

- In March, 57% of likely voters said Brown was the most likable candidate and 23% named Warren.
- Brown is seen as less likeable among Democrats than he was in March. Currently, 32% of Democrats say Brown is the most likeable candidate, down from 40% in March.
- Independents think Brown is more likeable by 58% to 14%.
- Women think Brown is more likeable by 47% to 29%.

Warren & Native American Issue

Most MA likely voters have at least a passing familiarity with news reports about Warren's Native American identification – 37% say they are very familiar with the stories, 33% are somewhat familiar, 12% are not very familiar, and 16% are not familiar at all.

- a. Republicans, Brown supporters, and those extremely interested in the election are most likely to be very familiar with the stories.

The issue is not having an impact on most likely voters – 72% of those who are familiar with the news reports say they will have no impact on their vote, but 23 percent say they will make them less likely to vote for Warren, 3% say they are more likely to vote for Warren, while 2% don't know.

- a. 31% of Independents and 6% of Obama supporters say they are less likely to vote for Warren because of news stories about her Native American identification.

Likely voters are divided on how well Warren has explained her Native American identity – 42% say she has not adequately explained it, 37% say she has, and 21% don't know.

- a. Democrats and Warren supporters are most likely to be satisfied with her explanation.
- b. Republicans and Brown supporters think she has not adequately explained her Native American identification.
- c. A majority of independents (57%) also feel she has not explained the situation enough.

Brown & Wall Street Issue

There is less awareness about news reports of Scott Brown's fundraising from Wall Street organizations – 19% are very familiar with the stories, 37% somewhat familiar, 24% not very familiar, and 19% not familiar at all.

- a. Even those who are very interested in the election are only marginally more familiar with the stories, with 27% saying they are very familiar.

As with Warren's Native American identification, news reports are not having much of an impact on MA likely voters. Among those voters who are familiar with news stories about Brown's Wall Street fundraising, 66% say the news reports have had no impact on their vote, 26 percent say they are less likely to vote for Brown, 4% say they are more likely to vote for Brown, while 4% don't know.

The Boston Globe Poll #33

MA 2012 Senate Election

Conducted by the UNH Survey Center
May, 2012

Technical Report

Method: Telephone interviews conducted with RDD landline and cellular telephones with Massachusetts residents who are likely November 2012 voters by the UNH Survey Center and the Cornell University Survey Research Institute.

Field Period: May 18 to May 31, 2012

Hours: 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Median Completion Time: 7 minutes

Full Sample

Sample Size: 651 randomly selected likely November 2012 voters

Sampling Error: +/- 3.8%

Response Rate (AAPOR #4): 21%

Weighting: The data have been weighted by the number of adults in a household and the number of telephone numbers, land and cellular, at which adults in the household can be reached in order to equalize the chances of an individual MA adult being selected. The data have also been weighted by the sex and race of the respondent and the region of the state based on the American Community Survey conducted by the US Census.
